Heart Aching Lovers is a companion piece to the poem Mortals Are Not Supposed To Love With The Intensity Of Gods. Both artists worked together to bring to life the story of Achilles and Patroclus through the lens of Chaos and Hybris.

Noelia Abregú Romero is a self-taught artist living in Madrid. Her journey started when she was five years old, drawing and painting to her heart's content until it became more than a simple hobby. It wasn't until the pandemic hit, however, that she realized the place art occupied within her life: it was a way for her to portray her moods, her fears, her feelings—it was a way to heal and understand what was going on around her.

Nowadays, she produces illustrations, favoring watercolors and color pencils, but she also enjoys digital drawing. Her art journey started with her passion for books and TV shows, and they continue to be a significant source of inspiration.
