

Tutte le collane editoriali dell'Officina di Studi Medievali sono sottoposte a valutazione da parte di revisori anonimi. Il contenuto di ogni volume è approvato da componenti del Comitato Scientifico ed editoriale dell'Officina o da altri specialisti che vengono scelti e periodicamente resi noti.

All the editorial series of the Officina di Studi Medievali are peer-reviewed series. The content of each volume is assessed by members of Advisory Board of the Officina or by other specialists who are chosen and whose names are periodically made known.

BIBLIOTECA DELL'OFFICINA DI STUDI MEDIEVALI

14.II.1

SOCIÉTÉ INTERNATIONALE POUR L'ÉTUDE DE LA PHILOSOPHIE MÉDIÉVALE

Presidenti onorari:

T. Gregory, Roma
J. Hamesse, Louvain-la-Neuve
R. Klibansky, Montreal / Oxford (†)
W. Kluxen, Bonn (†)
D. E. Luscombe, Sheffield
J. E. Murdoch, Harvard, Cambridge (USA) (†)
A. Zimmermann, Köln

Presidente:

J. Puig Montada, Madrid

Vice-Presidenti:

A. de Libera, Pris-Genève
T. B. Noone, Washington, D.C.
L. Sturlese, Lecce

Bureau:

P. J. J. M. Bakker, Nijmegen
A. Culleton, São Leopoldo
E. Jung, Łódź
C. Mews, Victoria (Australia)
P. Porro, Bari
T. Ricklin, München
M. A. Santiago de Carvalho, Coimbra
C. Schabel, Nicosia (Cyprus)

Segretario generale:

M. J. F. M. Hoenen, Freiburg im Breisgau

Editore responsabile delle pubblicazioni:

K. Emery Jr., Notre Dame (USA)

Commissione del Programma SIEPM 2007

L. Sturlese, Lecce
G. d'Onofrio, Salerno
A. Musco, Palermo
A. Maierù, Roma (†)
P. Porro; Bari

Commissione organizzatrice SIEPM 2007

C. Martello, Catania
A. Musco, Palermo
L. Pepi, Palermo
G. Roccaro, Palermo

Segreteria SIEPM 2007

Officina di Studi Medievali, Palermo
<http://www.officinastudimedievali.it>

SOCIÉTÉ INTERNATIONALE POUR L'ÉTUDE DE LA PHILOSOPHIE MÉDIÉVALE
(S.I.E.P.M.)

Universalità della Ragione. Pluralità delle Filosofie nel Medioevo
Universalité de la Raison. Pluralité des Philosophies au Moyen Âge
Universality of Reason. Plurality of Philosophies in the Middle Ages

XII Congresso Internazionale di Filosofia Medievale
Palermo, 17-22 settembre 2007

VOLUME II.1
COMUNICAZIONI
LATINA

a cura di
Alessandro MUSCO
e di Carla COMPAGNO - Salvatore D'AGOSTINO - Giuliana MUSOTTO
Indici di Giuliana MUSOTTO

2012

Carla COMPAGNO ha curato l'editing dei testi della sezione Lulliana; Salvatore D'AGOSTINO ha curato l'editing della sezione Latina del vol. II.2; Giuliana MUSOTTO ha curato l'uniformità redazionale dell'intero volume e gli Indici; Alessandro MUSCO ha curato la supervisione dell'editing redazionale del volume ed il coordinamento scientifico-editoriale.

Société Internationale pour l'Étude de la Philosophie Médiévale (S.I.E.P.M)
Universalità della Ragione. Pluralità delle Filosofie nel Medioevo = Universalité de la Raison.
Pluralité des Philosophies au Moyen Âge = Universality of Reason. Plurality of Philosophies in the Middle Ages : 12. Congresso Internazionale di Filosofia Medievale : Palermo, 17-22 settembre 2007. – Palermo : Officina di Studi Medievali, 2012.

ISBN 978-88-6485-025-2 (Intera opera)

V. II.1 : Comunicazioni : Latina / a cura di Alessandro Musco ... [et al.] ; indici di Giuliana Musotto.
(Biblioteca dell'Officina di Studi Medievali ; 14.II.1)

I. Musco, Alessandro

II. Compagno, Carla

III. D'Agostino, Salvatore

IV. Musotto, Giuliana

1. Filosofia – Medioevo – Atti – Palermo

180 CDD-21

ISBN 978-88-6485-049-8 (vol. II.1)

Cip: Biblioteca dell'Officina di Studi Medievali

I saggi qui pubblicati sono stati sottoposti a “Peer Review” / The essays published here have been “Peer Reviewed”

Collana diretta da:

Armando Bisanti, Olivier Boulnois, José Martínez Gasquez, Alessandro Musco, Luca Parisoli, Salvador Rus Rufino, Christian Trottmann, Pere Villalba i Varneda.

Copyright © 2012 by Officina di Studi Medievali

Via del Parlamento, 32 – 90133 Palermo

e-mail: edizioni@officinastudimedievali.it

www.officinastudimedievali.it - www.medioevo-shop.net

Ogni diritto di copyright di questa edizione e di adattamento, totale o parziale, con qualsiasi mezzo è riservato per tutti i Paesi del mondo. È vietata la riproduzione, anche parziale, compresa la fotocopia, anche ad uso interno o didattico, non autorizzata dall'editore.

Prima edizione, Palermo, luglio 2012

Stampa: FOTOGRAF – Palermo

Grafica editoriale: Alberto Musco

INDICE
TABLE DES MATIÈRES
TABLE OF CONTENTS

VOLUME I
SESSIONI PLENARIE

| | |
|--|-------|
| P. GASPARÉ LA BARBERA (OFMConv.), Saluto inaugurale | XIX |
| JOSEP PUIG MONTADA, Introduction | XXIII |
| JACQUELINE HAMESSE, Préface | XXV |
| ALESSANDRO MUSCO, Il XII Congresso Internazionale di Filosofia Medievale a Palermo | XXVII |
| ALESSANDRO MUSCO, Universalità della Ragione. Pluralità delle filosofie nel Medievo/ Universalité de la Raison. Pluralité des philosophies au Moyen Âge/ Universality of Reason. Plurality of Philosophies in the Middle Ages | XXXI |
| | |
| LORIS STURLESE, Universality of Reason and Plurality of Philosophies in the Middle Ages. Geography of Readers and Isograph of Text Diffusion before the Invention of Printing | 1 |
| OLIVIER BOULNOIS, Pourquoi la théologie? La raison dans la religion | 23 |
| RICHARD CROSS, Aristotle and Augustine: Two Philosophical Ancestors of Duns Scotus's Cognitive Psychology | 47 |
| CRISTINA D'ANCONA, Le traduzioni in latino e in arabo. Continuità e trasformazioni della tradizione filosofica greca fra tarda antichità e Medioevo | 73 |
| GIULIO D'ONOFRIO, Filosofi e teologi a Roma. Ascesa e declino dell'universalismo speculativo medievale | 105 |
| STEPHEN GERSH, Through the Rational to the Supra-Rational. Four Criteria of Non-Discursive Thinking in Medieval Platonism | 125 |
| DAG NIKOLAUS HASSE, Latin Averroes Translations of the First Half of the Thirteenth Century | 149 |
| GEORGI KAPRIEV, Die Verurteilung von Konstantinopel 1368 – Universalansprüche und Provinzialisierung | 179 |
| PAOLO LUCENTINI, Ermetismo e pensiero cristiano | 195 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| CHARLES H. MANEKIN, The Ambiguous Impact of Christian Scholasticism on Jewish Philosophy in the Late Middle Ages | 215 |
| CONSTANT MEWS, The Harmony of the Spheres: Musica in Pythagorean and Aristotelian Traditions in Thirteenth-Century Paris | 231 |
| PASQUALE PORRO, Individual Events, Universal Reasons. The Quest for Universality (and its Limits) in 13th Century Theology | 251 |
| MARWAN RASHED, Lumières Abbassides | 273 |
| THOMAS RICKLIN, Les voies de l'invention. Les langues vernaculaires de la Méditerranée latine comme berceau du premier humanisme | 291 |
| IRÈNE ROSIER-CATACH, Sur l'unité et la diversité linguistique: Roger Bacon, Boèce de Dacie et Dante | 309 |
| JOSEP-IGNASI SARANYANA, Filosofie regionali e regionalizzazione della filosofia nel Medioevo | 333 |
| TULLIO GREGORY, Per una storia delle filosofie medievali | 347 |
| Indice dei nomi | 361 |
| Indice dei manoscritti | 379 |
| Curricula dei curatori | 381 |
| Comitato Scientifico / Advisory Board dell'Officina di Studi Medievali | 383 |

VOLUME II.1

| | |
|---|-----|
| ALESSANDRO MUSCO, Universalità della Ragione. Pluralità delle filosofie nel Medioevo/ Universalité de la Raison. Pluralité des philosophies au Moyen Âge/ Universality of Reason. Plurality of Philosophies in the Middle Ages | XIX |
|---|-----|

Latina

| | |
|--|----|
| JUAN CARLOS ALBY, Martyrium verum, sententiam eorum. La crítica de San Ireneo a la concepción gnóstica del martirio | 1 |
| ROBERTO SCHIAVOLIN, Mysterium magnum: l'anima come secunda trinitas nel pensiero di Mario Vittorino | 11 |
| PAULA OLIVEIRA E SILVA, Visio Dei ineffabilis. La vision de Dieu comme expérience de communion chez saint Augustin | 19 |
| RENATO DE FILIPPIS, La retorica al servizio della "filosofia" nell'alto Medioevo | 29 |
| IGNACIO VERDÚ BERGANZA, Humildad y verdad en Agustín de Hipona | 37 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| CHIARA MILITELLO, Il rapporto fra oggetti geometrici, generi e specie in Alessandro di Afrodisia e Boezio | 45 |
| JUVENTINUS SAVIAN-FILHO, Qualitas singularis et qualitas communis chez Boèce: une convergence de philosophies | 53 |
| ARMANDO BISOGNO, Ragione e fede nel paradigma teologico dell'età carolingia | 65 |
| JOSÉ LUIS CANTÓN ALONSO, El hombre como lugar del universal en Escoto Eriúgena | 73 |
| ERNESTO SERGIO MAINOLDI, Scottorum pultes. Per una rivisitazione della questione irlandese nell'alto medioevo latino | 83 |
| ILARIA PARRI, L'ermetismo nella Cosmographia di Bernardo Silvestre | 91 |
| CARLO CHIURCO, Ganymede versus natura. Philosophical implications of Three Twelfth-Century works on homosexuality | 99 |
| GIACINTA SPINOSA, Traduzioni e neologismi medievali per un'antropologia teologica:cognitivus e cognoscitivus | 107 |
| JOHN A. DEMETRACOPOULOS, The stoic background to the universality of Anselm's definition of "God" in Proslogion 2: Boethius' Second Commentary on Aristotle's De Interpretatione ad 16a7-11 | 121 |
| SERGIO PAOLO BONANNI, Anselmo e Abelardo. Alle radici della theologia tra argomenti certissimi e ragioni verosimili | 139 |
| CHRISTIAN BROUWER, L'intellection des essences. Anselme et Augustin | 151 |
| EILEEN C. SWEENEY, Anselm in dialogue with the other | 159 |
| PIETRO PALMERI, Razionalità e libertà della creatura in Anselmo d'Aosta | 169 |
| CONCETTO MARTELLO, Sull'uso della filosofia antica nella theologia di Pietro Abelardo | 182 |
| GIUSEPPE ALLEGRO, An plura vel pauciora facere possit deus quam faciat et contra. La questione dell'onnipotenza divina al tempo di Pietro Abelardo | 187 |
| VERA RODRIGUES, Universalis dicitur quod communicabilis: raison et foi chez Thierry de Chartres | 195 |
| JUSSI VARKEMAA, Justification of private property: a case for natural reason | 203 |
| ISTVÁN P. BEJCZY, Vertus infuses et vertus acquises dans la théologie de la première moitié du XIII^e siècle | 211 |
| RICCARDO SACCENTI, La définition de la vertu chez les théologiens de la première moitié du XIII^e siècle | 219 |
| PAOLA BERNARDINI, La teoria dei media tra anima e corpo nel XIII secolo. Una riflessione sulla fisiologia umana nell'aristotelismo | 227 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| IRENE ZAVATTERO, L'acquisition de la vertu morale dans les premiers commentaires latins de l'Éthique à Nicomaque | 235 |
| MARCELLO PACIFICO, La Coronatio hierosolymitana del 1229: lo speculum dignitatis regis di Federico II. Un viaggio da Gerusalemme alla Sicilia nell'arcipelago mediterraneo della conoscenza | 245 |
| MASSIMILIANO LENZI, John Blund, Giovanni Filopono e le radici tardoantiche dell'Aristotele medievale | 261 |
| R. JAMES LONG, The anonymous De Anima of Assisi, biblioteca comunale cod. 138 | 271 |
| VALERIA A. BUFFON, Fronesis: connaissance et dilection du souverain bien chez les maîtres ès Arts de Paris vers 1250 | 281 |
| CECILIA PANTI, Il trattato De luce di Roberto Grossatesta. Una rilettura sulla base della nuova edizione del testo | 289 |
| ADRIANO OLIVA, Typologie, interprétation et datation de quelques marginalia au commentaire des Sentences de Thomas d'Aquin | 301 |
| JUAN FERNANDO SELLÉS DAUDERE, La razón humana es universal porque el acto de ser humano es trascendental | 311 |
| IGNACIO A. SILVA, Indeterminismo natural y acción divina en De Potentia Dei de Santo Tomás de Aquino | 321 |
| SILVANA FILIPPI, Cuatro "filosofías del Éxodo" y la crítica heideggeriana a la onto-teo-logía | 329 |
| ANDREA DI MAIO, "Ragioni dimostrative e probabili" o "potenza della testimonianza e dei miracoli": due approcci dialogali ai non cristiani in Tommaso d'Aquino e in Bonaventura | 339 |
| BARBARA FAES, La violenza nel raptus secondo Rolando di Cremona e Tommaso d'Aquino | 349 |
| ROSA ERRICO, Ragione umana e verità. Il problema ontologico del senso dell'essere in Edith Stein interprete di Tommaso d'Aquino | 357 |
| FRANCISCO LEÓN FLORIDO, La condena universitaria de 1277: ¿ la ortodoxia religiosa contra la filosofía? Problemas de interpretación | 367 |
| JOSÉ ÁNGEL GARCÍA CUADRADO, Lógica universal y gramática particular: la distinción nombre-verbo en la paráfrasis al Peri Hermeneias de Alberto Magno | 377 |
| ANTONELLA SANNINO, La questione della magia e dell'ermetismo nel De Mirabilibus Mundi | 387 |
| ANDREA VELLA, Universali ed eternità della specie nel De Aeternitate Mundi di Sigieri di Brabante | 395 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| GUIDO ALLINEY, L'acrasia nel pensiero di Enrico di Gand | 401 |
| CATHERINE KÖNIG-PRALONG, L'expertise théologique par Henri de Gand: raisonner avec des cas | 411 |
| MIKOŁAJ OLSZEWSKI, Contemplation as via media between praxis and theory. A study of the prologue to the Commentary on the Sentences by Augustine of Ancona | 419 |
| MARCIN BUKAŁA, Reason and rationality in the scholastic outlook on business activity | 427 |
| DELPHINE CARRON, Représentations médiévales du sage stoïcien à travers la figure de Caton (XII^e-XIV^e siècles) | 433 |
| MICHAEL DUNNE, Richard FitzRalph on the human mind as a trinity of memory, understanding and will | 443 |
| MARCO TOSTE, Specula Principum Lusitaniae. The importance of Aristotle's practical works | 451 |
| SALVADOR RUS RUFINO, La Política de Aristóteles en la edad media | 459 |
| MONICA B. CALMA, Jean de Mirecourt et les échos de la philosophie anglaise à l'Université de Paris au XIV^e siècle | 471 |
| CLAUDE PANACCIO, Le nominalisme du XIV^e siècle et l'universalité des concepts | 481 |
| CHRISTIAN TROTTMANN, Pluralité philosophique dans le traité de Guiral Ot sur la vision de Dieu | 489 |
| FEDERICA CALDERA, Croire et savoir: science philosophique et sagesse théologique chez Godefroid de Fontaines | 501 |
| JAUME MENSA I VALLS, Dall'Informació Espiritual di Arnaldo da Villanova ai Capitula Regni Siciliae di Federico di Sicilia: proposte sui neofiti saraceni, ebrei e servi greci | 509 |
| ALEXANDER FIDORA, Concepts of philosophical rationality in inter-religious dialogue: Crispin, Abelard, Aquinas, Llull | 519 |
| JOSEP MANUEL UDINA, La universalidad de la razón medieval es cuestionable | 529 |
| PEDRO ROCHE ARNAS, Desde San Agustín al agustinismo político en el De Ecclesiastica Potestate de Egidio Romano | 539 |
| FRANCISCO BERTELLONI, La misma causa no puede producir efectos contrarios (Modos causales en las teorías políticas de Egidio Romano y Marsilio de Padua) | 549 |
| DAVID PICHÉ, Les débats au sujet de l'espèce intelligible et du verbe mental dans les quodlibeta de Gerard de Bologne (c. 1240/50 - 1317) | 557 |
| GIANFRANCO PELLEGRINO, Meister Eckhart e Dietrich di Freiberg sulla dottrina dell'ímago | 565 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| LYDIA WEGENER, Meister Eckharts unbekannte Erben: der Traktat Von dem anefluzze des vater als Beispiel für die Rezeption und Transformation eckhartischen Denkens in anonymen volkssprachlichen Texten des 14. Jahrhunderts | 573 |
| ALESSANDRA BECCARISI, Der hæhste under den meister. Il De anima di Aristotele nell'opera di Meister Eckhart | 587 |
| TAMAR TSOPURASHVILI, Negatio negationis als paradigmata in der Eckhartschen Dialektik | 595 |

VOLUME II.2

Latina

| | |
|--|-----|
| FIORELLA RETUCCI, Eckhart, Proclo e il Liber de Causis | 603 |
| ELISA RUBINO, Pseudo-Dionigi Areopagita in Eckhart | 613 |
| NADIA BRAY, Meister Eckhart lettore di Seneca | 621 |
| ALESSANDRO PALAZZO, Le citazioni avicenniane nell'opera di Meister Eckhart | 631 |
| GUY GULDENTOPS, Durandus of st. Pourçain's legitimization of religious (in)tolerance | 639 |
| UBALDO VILLANI LUBELLI, Intelligere est perfectio simpliciter dicta. Henry's of Lübeck second quodlibet | 651 |
| MARTA VITTORINI, Some notes about the metaphysical composition of individuals in Walter Burley | 659 |
| WILLIAM J. COURtenay, Avenues of intellectual exchange between England and the continent, 1320-1345 | 669 |
| CHRISTIAN RODE, Divine and human reason in Ockham | 677 |
| LEONARDO CAPELLETTI, Veritas dubitabilis: la polemica tra Wodeham e Chatton sulla Q. II del Prologo alle Sentenze di Ockham | 685 |
| JOSÉ MARÍA SOTO RÁBANOS, Aristoteles en la obra De Concordantia legis Dei de Juan de Valladolid | 691 |
| ROLF DARGE, Neues in der spätmittelalterlichen Lehre vom transzendentalen Guten | 703 |
| FABRIZIO AMERINI, Paul of Venice on the nature of the Possible Intellect | 713 |
| RICCARDO STROBINO, Paul of Venice and Peter of Mantua on obligations | 721 |
| ALESSANDRO D. CONTI, Some notes on Paul of Venice's theory of cognition | 731 |
| MARIO BERTAGNA, Paul of Venice's commentary on the Posterior Analytics | 739 |
| GABRIELE GALLUZZO, Averroes re-interpreted: Paul of Venice on the essence and defi- | |

| | |
|---|-----|
| nition of sensible substances | 747 |
| MARTA BORGO, Paul of Venice on the first book of the Nicomachean Ethics: some considerations about the Conclusiones Ethicorum | 753 |
| KAZUHIKO YAMAKI, Universalität der Vernunft und Pluralität der Philosophie in De pace fidei des Nikolaus von Kues | 763 |
| PAULA PICO ESTRADA, Perfección unitrina del amor y libertad en De visione Dei de Nicolás de Cusa | 771 |
| JOSÉ GONZÁLEZ RÍOS, La pluralidad de discursos y nombres divinos en el pensamiento de Nicolás de Cusa a la luz de sus primeras prédicas | 779 |
| JESÚS DE GARAY, La recepción de Proclo en Nicolás de Cusa | 789 |
| GREGORIO PIAIA, Pericolo turco, universalità del vero e pluralità delle filosofie nel De Pace Fidei di Nicolò Cusano | 797 |
| DAVIDE MONACO, La visione di Dio e la pace nella fede | 805 |
| LORENZA TROMBONI, Il «De doctrina Platonicorum»: note per un platonismo savonaroliano | 811 |
| PAOLO EDOARDO FORNACIARI, Ipotesi sulla composizione della Apologia conclusionum suarum di Giovanni Pico della Mirandola | 819 |
| M ^a SOCORRO FERNÁNDEZ-GARCÍA, Pico della Mirandola (1463-1494), precursor del diálogo intercultural en las 900 tesis de omni re scibili | 825 |
| FOSCA MARIANI ZINI, Remarques sur l'argumentation topique dans le premier humanisme italien | 831 |
| JOSÉ LUIS FUERTES HERREROS, Estoicismo y escolástica en Salamanca a finales del siglo XVI | 839 |
| DANIEL HEIDER, Suárez and Javelli on transcendentals and divisions of being | 849 |
| DAVID SVOBODA, F. Suárez on transcendental unity in his Disputationes Metaphysicae - the addition of the one to being and the priority of the one over the many | 861 |
| GABRIELLA ZUCCOLIN, The Speculum Phisionomie by Michele Savonarola | 873 |
| LUIGI DELLA MONICA, «That one cognoscitive power of the soul [...] is a potential omniformity». Platonismo e aristotelismo nella gnoseologia di Ralph Cudworth (1617-1688) | 887 |
| Franciscana | |
| P. STÉPHANE OPPES, Presentazione | 897 |

| | |
|---|------|
| P. BARNABA HECHICH, OFM, Spunti e riflessioni basilari suggerite dal libro III della Lectura e dell'Ordinatio Del B. Giovanni Duns Scoto edite negli anni 2003-2007 dalla Commissione Scotista | 901 |
| CHARLES BOLYARD, John Duns Scotus on Accidents | 911 |
| ANTOINE CÔTÉ, The Theological Metaphysics of Odo Rigaldi | 923 |
| LUIS ALBERTO DE BONI, Catholici te laudant omnipotentem - A noção de onipotência segundo Duns Scotus | 935 |
| CRUZ GONZÁLEZ-AYESTA, Voluntad natural y voluntad libre según Duns Escoto | 943 |
| MANUEL LÁZARO PULIDO, La categoría «Pobreza» en la Metafísica de la expresión de San Buenaventura | 953 |
| GERHARD LEIBOLD, Intentionalität bei Petrus Johannis Olivi | 963 |
| GIULIANA MUSOTTO, La seconda questione disputata De dilectione Dei di Nicola di Ockham | 969 |
| STÉPHANE OPPES, La filosofia del linguaggio come filosofia prima nel sistema di Bonaventura. Oltre la questione bonaventuriana | 975 |
| LUCA PARISOLI, Paraconsistenza scotista: Pseudo-Scoto e Duns Scoto | 989 |
| ROBERTO HOFMEISTER PICH, Duns Scotus on the credibility of Christian doctrines | 997 |
| ANTÓNIO ROCHA MARTINS, Teologia e Metáfora em São Boaventura | 1013 |
| TIZIANA SUAREZ-NANI, Un'altra critica alla noetica averroista: Francesco della Marca e l'unicità dell'intelletto | 1025 |
| JUHANA TOIVANEN, Peter Olivi on Practical Reasoning | 1033 |

Lulliana

| | |
|---|------|
| ANTONIO BORDOY, Notes sur récupération du Psd.-Denys dans la cosmologie lullienne: questions sur la création du monde | 1049 |
| JULIA BUTIÑÁ JIMÉNEZ, Alrededor del concepto de la divinidad y del hombre en el Libre de meravelles: de Llull al Humanismo | 1059 |
| MARCIA L. COLISH, The Book of the Gentile and the Three Sages: Ramon Lull as Anselm Redivivus? | 1077 |
| CARLA COMPAGNO, La combinatoria degli elementi nelle opere mediche di Raimondo Lullo | 1089 |
| CÁNDIDA FERRERO HERNÁNDEZ-JOSÉ MARTÍNEZ GÁZQUEZ, Ramón Llull y el Liber de Angelis | 1099 |

| | |
|---|------|
| FRANCESCO FIORENTINO, Credere et intelligere dans les œuvres latines tardives de Lulle | 1109 |
| NÚRIA GÓMEZ LLAUGER, Aproximaciones al Liber de potentia, objeto et actu de Ramon Llull | 1119 |
| ESTEVE JAULENT, El Ars generalis última de Ramon Llull: Presupuestos metafísicos y éticos | 1129 |
| MARTA M. M. ROMANO, Aspetti della strumentativa in Raimondo Lullo | 1153 |
| JOSEP E. RUBIO ALBARRACÍN, Ramon Llull: Le langage et la raison | 1163 |
| MARÍA ASUNCIÓN SÁNCHEZ MANZANO, Ramón Llull: Quattuor libri principiorum y la filosofía de su tiempo | 1169 |
| JORGE USCATESCU BARRÓN, La relación entre el Ars inventiva veritatis y el Ars amativa (1290) | 1181 |
| JOHN DUDLEY, A revised interpretation of the mediaeval reception of Aristotle's Metaphysics | 1197 |
| FERNANDO DOMÍNGUEZ REBOIRAS, Postfazione | XXXV |
| Indice dei nomi antichi e medievali | 1203 |
| Indice dei nomi moderni | 1215 |
| Indice dei manoscritti | 1239 |
| Curricula dei curatori | 1243 |
| Comitato Scientifico / Advisory Board dell'Officina di Studi Medievali | 1245 |

VOLUME III ORIENTALIA

| | |
|--|-----|
| ALESSANDRO MUSCO, Universalità della Ragione. Pluralità delle filosofie nel Medievo/ Universalité de la Raison. Pluralité des philosophies au Moyen Âge/ Universality of Reason. Plurality of Philosophies in the Middle Ages | XIX |
|--|-----|

Arabica

| | |
|--|----|
| CATARINA BELO, Some Notes on Averroes' Appraisal of non-Islamic Religions, with a Focus on Christianity and Judaism | 1 |
| EMILY COTTREL, Trivium and Quadrivium: East of Baghdad | 11 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| ALFREDO CULLETON, Alfarabi y Maimonides: la misión trascultural de la filosofía. Alfarabi and Maimonides: the transcultural mission of philosophy | 27 |
| PAOLA D'AIELLO, La speculazione islamo-iraniana tra Sohravardī e Mollā Ṣadrā Šīrāzī | 33 |
| DANIEL DE SMET, La perfection de l'intellect et de l'âme selon le Kitāb al-Anwār al-latīfā de Muḥammad b. Ṭāhir al-Ḥāritī (m. 1188). Recherches de noétique ismaélienne | 39 |
| ROSALIE HELENA DE SOUZA PEREIRA, L'universalità della Šarī'a e le leggi particolari (nómoi) nel pensiero politico di Averroè | 49 |
| MATTEO DI GIOVANNI, Averroes' Notion of Primary Substance | 55 |
| DEMETRIO GIORDANI, Conoscenza e visio beatifica. Il Punto di vista di Shaykh Ahmad Sirhindī | 67 |
| HANS KRAML, Ibn Ruschds Hermeneutik der Religion | 75 |
| CELINA A. LÉRTORA MENDOZA, Tres versiones del Concordismo Medieval: Averroes, Maimónides y Tomás De Aquino | 83 |
| JOSÉ FRANCISCO MEIRINHOS, Was there a Portuguese Averroism in the 14th Century? Alphonsus Dionisii and Thomas Scotus | 93 |
| IVANA PANZeca, Il Partau Nāmah di Sohravardī: elementi filosofici e teologici | 109 |
| INES PETA, Il cuore come organo della conoscenza divina nel Kitāb šarḥ aḡā'ib al-qalb di Abū Ḥāmid al-Ġazālī | 123 |
| RAFAEL RAMÓN GUERRERO, Un caso de diálogo religioso en el siglo X: Las respuestas del filósofo cristiano Yahyā b. 'Adī al judío 'Irs b. 'Utmān | 131 |
| GIUSEPPE ROCCARO, Universalità e analogia: metafisica e logica nel pensiero islamico | 141 |
| ANGELO SCARABEL, Sufismo e conoscenza. A proposito degli Ūlū 'l-albāb nei versetti coranici | 153 |
| PINELLA TRAVAGLIA, Considerazioni sulla magia nel medioevo. Il Libro dell'agricoltura nabatea | 165 |
| ELVIRA WAKELNIG, Proclus in Aristotelian disguise. Notes on the Arabic transmission of Proclus' Elements of Theology | 179 |

Indica

| | |
|---|-----|
| MARGHERITA SERENA SACCONI, Il Buddha come fonte di retta conoscenza nella Pramāṇasiddhi del Pramāṇavārttika di Dharmakīrти | 193 |
|---|-----|

Judaica

| | |
|--|-----|
| JORGE M. AYALA, La polémica judeo-cristiana de Pedro Alfonso de Huesca | 205 |
| MARIENZA BENEDETTO, La divisione delle scienze nell'enciclopedismo ebraico medievale: filosofia naturale, scienze matematiche e scienza divina nell'introduzione al Midrash ha-hokmah di Yehudah ha-Cohen | 209 |
| ROBERTO GATTI, The Jews And The Irrational: Gersonides' treatment of dreams, divination and prophecy | 217 |
| LUCIANA PEPI, Il termine sekel (intelletto-ragione) nel Malmad hatalmidim di Jaqov Anatoli | 229 |
| JOZEF MATULA, Thomas Aquinas and his Reading of Isaac ben Solomon Israeli | 239 |
| JOSEP PUIG MONTADA, Hasday ha-Sefardi and the Maimonidean Apocrypha | 247 |
| JOSÉ MARÍA SOTO RÁBANOS, Aristóteles en la obra De concordantia legis Dei de Juan de Valladolid | 257 |
| GABI WEBER, The Esoteric Character of Jacob Anatoli's Malmad ha-Talmidim | 269 |

ByzantinaSessione speciale: Symbol and Image in the Middle Age

| | |
|--|-----|
| MARIA BETTETINI, Presentazione | 281 |
| STEFANIA BONFIGLIOLI, L'immagine, il suo oltre. Eikōn e agalma nel neoplatonismo | 285 |
| ROSANNA GAMBINO, Icona, natura e persona nel secondo concilio niceno | 297 |
| FRANCESCO PAPARELLA, Natura e valore dell'immagine. La relazione tra segno iconico e significazione traslata nella cultura carolingia: il caso dei Libri carolini | 309 |
| ANCA VASILIU, Image de personne: l'eikōn chez Basile de Césarée | 317 |

* * * *

| | |
|--|-----|
| GEORGE ARABATZIS, "Mos Geometricus" in Theodoros II Lascaris | 329 |
| ALBERTO DEL CAMPO ECHEVERRÍA, Combinación de los paradigmas henológico y ontológico en Juan Damasceno | 337 |
| VALERIO NAPOLI, Le peripezie della ragione. Debolezza e potenza del lógos protologico in Damasco | 345 |
| MICHELE TRIZIO, Un ammiratore bizantino di Proclo. La dottrina dell'intelletto di Eustrazio di Nicea | 359 |

| | |
|---|-----|
| Indice dei nomi | 367 |
| Curricula dei curatori | 383 |
| Comitato Scientifico / Advisory Board dell'Officina di Studi Medievali | 385 |

Alexander Fidora

Concepts of Philosophical Rationality in Inter-Religious Dialogue: Crispin, Abelard, Aquinas, Llull*

This paper analyses the way in which the genre of inter-religious dialogue contributed towards shaping the concept of philosophical rationality in the Latin West from the eleventh to the early fourteenth century.

To this end, four concepts of philosophical rationality – as these were developed in different inter-religious dialogues and other apologetic writings – will be presented and discussed: first, the concept of rationality underlying Gilbert Crispin's (1045-1117) Disputationes; second, that of Peter Abelard (1079-1142) in his Collationes; third, that of Thomas Aquinas (1224/25-1274) in De rationibus fidei and the Summa contra gentiles, and, finally, that of Ramon Llull (1232-1316) as expressed in his Ars.

1. Gilbert Crispin: From Hermeneutics to Philosophical Apologetics

The first author to be considered, Gilbert Crispin, Abbot of Westminster during the eleventh century, wrote two apologetic dialogues: a Disputatio iudaei et christiani and a Disputatio christiani cum gentili. The former includes a dedicatory letter to Anselm of Canterbury – whom Gilbert may have met during his early years at Bec –, in which the author explains that the work is, in fact, a report of a genuine disputation he conducted with a learned Jew on matters of faith.¹ Following the traditional pattern of Jewish-Christian disputations, the dialogue turns out to be a treatise on hermeneutical issues concerning the interpretation of the Old Testament, with both interlocutors relying on the authority of Scripture (scripturarum aequa testimonio nitens eidem ipsi).² The merit of this dialogue lies not so much in its reflections on the relation between faith and reason, but rather in the pro-

* This paper has been written with the support of the research project “The Perception of Islam in Medieval Europe” (Project FFI2008-06919-C02-02/FILO of the DGI-MEC and 2009SGR00824 of the AGAUR-Generalitat de Catalunya) at the Autonomous University of Barcelona. – I am grateful for the help of Robert D. Hughes (Prague).

¹ Both dialogues will be quoted from the critical edition of Gilbert's works by A. S. Abulafia and G. R. Evans: GILBERT CRISPIN, The Works of Gilbert Crispin, Abbot of Westminster (Auctores Britannici Medii Aevi, 8), Oxford University Press, London-Oxford 1986. In brackets we will indicate the page references to the recent Latin-German edition: GILBERT CRISPIN, Religionsgespräche mit einem Juden und einem Heiden, ed. and transl. K. W. Wilhelm and G. Wilhelmi (Herders Bibliothek der Philosophie des Mittelalters, 1), Herder, Freiburg i. Br. 2005.

² GILBERT CRISPIN, The Works, cit., p. 9 (32).

cedural remarks it contains, such as, for instance, the Jew's request at the beginning of the dialogue for a discussion toleranti animo,³ evoking reason in this context less as a counterpart to faith than as the opposite of polemics: His in rebus rationi potius vacare volo quam contentioni.⁴ Yet, while a friendly atmosphere does, in fact, prevail throughout the conversation, this atmosphere does not lead to the conversion of the Jew, for at the end of the disputation the respective positions of the interlocutors seem to be just as far apart as they were at the start.

The meagre outcome from this authority-based dialogue with a Jew may have served as the point of departure for Gilbert's rigorous revision of his apologetics, which, in turn, led him to conceive of the second disputation, wherein he shifted the dispute to a more general level: In his Disputatio christiani cum gentili no longer do we find the representatives of different religions engaged in debate, but rather a Christian together with a gentile, the latter of whom identifies himself with the pagan theists of the Ancient philosophical tradition.⁵ Unlike in the former disputation, therefore, arguments from Scripture are dismissed accordingly in this work right from the outset: Omittamus igitur scripturarum auctoritatem [...]».⁶ Instead the partners within this dialogue agree that reason alone should be their judge: «Iudicem sequamur rationem.⁷ Now, what is of great interest for the present purposes, is the very concept of reason employed in this dialogue. Gilbert himself gives a very clear definition of reason, using the gentile, i.e. the philosopher, as his mouthpiece:

Reason is that power of the soul which distinguishes the just from the unjust. And justice involves giving to everybody and preserving for him that which is his. Therefore, reason requires that men give to Him, from Whom they come [i.e. to God], that which is His, insofar as they are men.⁸

This concept of rationality can be traced back, through Anselm of Canterbury, to the stoicism of Cicero, suggesting a very close link between philosophy as a whole and ethics.⁹ Again, as in the previous disputation, it seems that reason's counterpart is not, in the first instance, faith, for we must seek this counterpart in the ethical domain rather than on the epistemological level, or at least admit that it has strong ethical implications.

The aforesaid definition of philosophical reason, namely, as the ability to distinguish between what is just and what is not, is complemented by a number of remarks on the methodology of philosophical argumentation. Thus, Gilbert opens the disputation with a reflection on logic, in which he explains that the constitutive parts of logic are invention

³ Ibid., p. 10 (34).

⁴ Ibid., p. 11 (36).

⁵ Ibid., pp. 62-63 (138-140).

⁶ Ibid., p. 64 (140).

⁷ Ibid.

⁸ Ibid., p. 63 (138): «Ratio est ea vis animi, quae iustum ab iniusto discernit. Iustitia est dare ac ser[vare] cuique, quod suum est. Ad eum igitur, a quo est homo, exigit ratio, ut homo referat hoc ipsum, quia est homo».

⁹ CICERO, De finibus, V, XXIII, 65, and ANSELM's Monologion, LXVIII. C. J. Mews has pointed to the similarities between Gilbert's text and another work from the Anselmian milieu: the Disputatio inter christianum et gentilem; C. J. MEWS, St Anselm and Roscelin: Some New Texts and Their Implications: I. The "De incarnatione verbi" and the "Disputatio inter christianum et gentilem", in «Archives d'histoire doctrinale et littéraire du Moyen Âge» 58 (1991), pp. 55-98, esp. pp. 77ff.

and judgment (inventio et iudicium sunt constitutivae partes logicae).¹⁰ With this, he draws once more on Ciceronian-Boethian source material, also present in Anselm. Along with the logical tradition leading up to the twelfth century, Gilbert conceives of logic in terms of Boethius's In Ciceronis Topica and his De differentiis topicis, works in which invention and judgment form a complex organic whole.¹¹ He also shares with this tradition the belief that reasoning, as this is developed in the Topics, is both probable and demonstrative. In a passage from De altaris sacramento he states:

The topics under which we prove something to be or not to be are either inherent in the thing under discussion or brought in from outside it. But topics taken from the outside of the subject do not provide a less convincing fides, i.e. certainty, than those inherent in the thing under discussion.¹²

Following Cicero,¹³ Gilbert is therefore combining what we would call today topical and demonstrative arguments in a remarkable way saying that they may both lead to equally certain conclusions.

With Gilbert one witnesses the discovery of philosophical reason as a medium for inter-religious dialogue, a discovery which becomes manifest in the transition from a dialogue between the confessions to a philosophical dialogue about religion. The concept of philosophical reason put forward by Gilbert, stems from the Ciceronian-Boethian tradition and is characterized, as we have seen, by a strong ethical commitment and a debt to the Late Ancient dialectical tradition.

2. Peter Abelard: Faith, Reason and Opinion

If we turn to Peter Abelard and his Collationes, we can observe some interesting similarities between this work and Gilbert's Disputatio christiani cum gentili, even though, as J. Marenbon has pointed out, it is not likely that Abelard was familiar with this work.¹⁴

Unfortunately, we are able neither to discuss this question here nor to touch on the different problems the Collationes pose with regard to dating or to the contested issue of the philosopher's identity, etc.¹⁵ Instead we shall take a brief look, once more, at the concept of ¹⁰ GILBERT CRISPIN, The Works, cit., p. 62 (136).

¹¹ On the interrelatedness of invention and judgment, as developed in Boethius's In Ciceronis Topica, and its role in eleventh-century dialectic, especially in Anselm of Canterbury, see the excellent study by P. BOSCHUNG, From a Topical Point of View. Dialectic in Anselm of Canterbury's "De grammatico" (Studien und Texte zur Geistesgeschichte des Mittelalters, 90), Brill, Leiden 2006, esp. pp. 35-36.

¹² GILBERT CRISPIN, The Works, cit., p. 125: «Loci, ex quibus aliquid esse vel non esse probamos, alii sunt in ipso, alii extrinsecus ab ipso, unde agitur; nec tamen minorem faciunt fidem loci extrinsecus sumptu quam loci haerentes in ipso, unde agitur». The English translation is quoted (with slight changes) from G. R. EVANS, Gilbert Crispin, Abbot of Westminster. The Forming of a Monastic Scholar, in «Studia Monastica» 22 (1980), pp. 63-82, here p. 77.

¹³ Cf., for instance, CICERO, Topica, II, 8.

¹⁴ Cf. his Introduction to PETER ABELARD, Collationes, ed. and transl. J. Marenbon and G. Orlandi, Clarendon Press, Oxford 2001, p. XL.

¹⁵ For these and other questions, S. SEIT's comprehensive interpretation of the Collationes: «Dilectio consummatio legis». Abaelards 'Gespräch eines Philosophen, eines Juden und eines Christen' und die Grenzen einer rationalen Gotteslehre, in M. LUTZ-BACHMANN-A. FIDORA (Eds.), Juden, Christen und Muslime. Religionsdia- philosophical reason as depicted in this dialogue.

Abelard insists even more than Gilbert himself on the need for genuinely philosophical argumentation within the sphere of inter-faith dialogue. He speaks programmatically of two swords, the sword of Scripture and that of reason, and the range of philosophical reasoning for matters of faith receives explicit discussion at the beginning of the second Collatio, in which the philosopher criticises what he calls Gregory's «escape-clause for wretches» (miserorum refugium), i.e. the question of the relation between insight and merit.¹⁶ Even though the philosopher's radical position, as expounded in this passage, may not be a faithful reflection of Abelard's own views on this matter – these views often being expressed in a more moderate fashion –, it provides a more than tolerable match with the account given in his late Theologia Scholarium.¹⁷

As far as the concept of philosophy itself is concerned, there can be no doubt that Abelard moves within the same tradition as did Gilbert, i.e. the stoic legacy. In presenting himself, Abelard's philosopher states:

When I had studied for a long time in our philosophical schools and had become learned both in philosophical reasoning and the philosophical authorities, at length I turned my attention to moral philosophy. Moral philosophy is the goal of all branches of knowledge; it is so as to study it that all the other disciplines must first be mastered.¹⁸

This concept of philosophy, with its particular stress on ethics, is decisive for the entire direction the Collationes take. For, as is well known, the Collationes develop around the idea of the summum bonum, drawing upon Cicero, Seneca and other authors from the stoic tradition as sources. Yet, in our opinion, it may not be enough to explain Abelard's strong commitment in this work to ethics as the cornerstone of philosophy in terms of his familiarity with a certain philosophical tradition alone; this commitment, rather, seems further to suggest an attempt on his part to provide a philosophical basis that corresponds to the requirements of rational discourse on matters of faith between different communities, here conceived precisely as leges, i.e. in ethical terms.

As far as methodology is concerned, we find Abelard introducing some remarkable distinctions into his notion of dialectic as this regards Gilbert. Thus, he opposes opinion and reason, from the outset, saying that the former, i.e. opinion, pertains to faith when this is not philosophically justified, while the latter, i.e. reasoning, is the proper activity of philosophy¹⁹ – an opposition which reminds one of the controversy between Abelard and Bernard of Clairvaux on the definition of faith as an existimatio.²⁰ loge im Mittelalter, Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft, Darmstadt 2004, pp. 40-95.

¹⁶ PETER ABELARD, Collationes, cit., pp. 6 and 88-91.

¹⁷ See the discussion in MARENBERG's Introduction, cit., pp. LV-LVIII.

¹⁸ PETER ABELARD, Collationes, cit., p. 3 (English); the Latin texts (p. 2) reads: «Nostrorum itaque scolis diu intentus et tam ipsorum rationibus quam auctoritatibus eruditus, ad moralem tandem me contuli philosophiam, quae omnium finis est disciplinarum et propter quam cetera omnia praelibenda sunt studia».

¹⁹ Ibid., pp. 2 («in omnibus non opiniones hominum, sed rationis sequi ducatum»), 8 («ratio vos induxit alii qua an solam hic hominum opiniinem»), 14 («potius hic ratio detinet quam opinio») et passim.

²⁰ On this controversy, P. DINZELBACHER, Bernhard von Clairvaux. Leben und Werk des berühmten Zisterziensers, Wissenschaftliche Buchgesellschaft, Darmstadt 1998, p. 241.

This distinction, absent from the conception of Gilbert, will have important consequences for the further development of dialectic, as shall be seen later. It goes hand in hand with a reassessment of the validity of certain topics or loci. While Gilbert claimed that extrinsic and inherent topics may lead to the same degree of certainty, Abelard states most clearly that this is not the case:

Philosophers have been right to judge the topics of such arguments [i.e. arguments based on authority and tradition] [...] as entirely extrinsic, resting on opinion rather than the truth and needing no cleverness of invention at devising arguments founded on them, since the person who employs them is using someone else's words, not his own.²¹

As in Gilbert so for Abelard, topical arguments are not simply opposed to demonstrative reasoning, but rather topics and invention form a part of the latter. What is new, however, is the open opposition Abelard establishes between extrinsic topics, on the one hand, and inherent topics, on the other, as regards the kind of certainty they yield. According to Abelard's interpretation of the Ciceronian-Boethian tradition,²² the only topics capable of producing strong philosophical arguments – for inter-faith dialogue as well as for any other purpose – are the inherent ones, while extrinsic topics are relegated to the domain of pure opinion. Abelard's views concerning the value of extrinsic topics and of opinion clearly affect the status of faith, which turns out to be a deficient epistemic mode, when not philosophically founded.

Though one can observe striking similarities between Gilbert and Abelard concerning their stoic background and their stress on an ethically charged conception of philosophy, one must conclude that Abelard clearly goes further in the way he describes the complex relations that obtain between dialectic and faith as regards reason and opinion.

3. Thomas Aquinas: Splitting Topical and Demonstrative Reasoning

With the reception of the Aristotelian corpus in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, the philosophical foundations of inter-religious dialogue change considerably. As these changes cannot be presented here in detail, we shall concentrate on some of the salient philosophical features of thirteenth-century inter-religious dialogue as they are expressed by Thomas Aquinas in De rationibus fidei and the Summa contra gentiles.

Both works start from the premise that it is of no avail to employ arguments from authority for apologetic ends, since they would not be accepted by Muslims. Instead, Aquinas sets out in De rationibus fidei by saying that the partners in a dialogue should be convinced by either moral or philosophical reasons, whereas in the Summa contra gentiles he speaks of philosophical reasons alone.²³ The fact that Aquinas marks a distinction in De

²¹ PETER ABELARD, Collationes, cit., p. 93 (English); the Latin text (p. 92) reads: «Unde bene philosophi talium argumentorum locos [...] omnino extrinsecos et a re disiunctos et omni virtute destitutos iudicaverunt, utpote in opinione potius quam in veritate consistentes et nullo ingenii artificio ad suorum inventionem argumentorum egentes, cum is, qui ea inducit, non suis sed alienis utatur verbis».

²² For his interpretation, Abelard is more dependent on Boethius and his De differentiis topicis, II and III, than on Cicero.

²³ THOMAS AQUINAS, De rationibus fidei, I, and Summa contra gentiles, I, 1-9.

rationibus between moral and philosophical arguments and omits the former in the Summa, is telling. As we have seen, while in Gilbert and especially in Abelard, a pre-eminently ethical concept of philosophy dominated their discourse, in Aquinas ethical considerations seem to take a back seat. In fact, from the first chapters of the Summa contra gentiles onwards, it becomes evident that the concept of philosophy characterising Aquinas's apologetics is a purely theoretical one, namely that of Aristotelian metaphysics and its philosophical theology.²⁴

Aquinas combines this metaphysical approach with an Aristotelian epistemology, in particular with the latter's theory of demonstration as laid down in the Posterior Analytics. He shows that there can be no demonstration of God's essence in the strict sense of a demonstratio propter quid, since reason cannot attain God's quiddity; nor is it possible to penetrate into his essence by way of demonstratio quia, i.e. through His effects, «since the effects are not equal in power (virtus) to the cause».²⁵ Demonstratio quia only proves the existence of God, though does not do similarly for the Trinity, the Incarnation or the other Articles of Faith. This is why, for Aquinas, no necessary reasons, as he says in De rationibus,²⁶ can be adduced to prove the divine mysteries, even though, of course, these latter are in no way contrary to reason. According to Aquinas, only topical reasons can do so, i.e. probable arguments such as arguments of convenience, analogies, similitudes, etc.²⁷ Without doubt, Aquinas's treatment here of the concept of topics differs considerably from that of Gilbert and Abelard, since he regards the topics as clearly opposed to demonstrative science – a shift which has to do with the reception of the Posterior Analytics and their scholastic interpretation.

As is well known, Aquinas's favourite strategy as far as apologetics goes, however, is the negative one: it consists of refuting the interlocutor's opposing claims and objections against the Christian faith, since, in the final analysis, the latter cannot be in disagreement with the truth. He states:

Whatever arguments are raised against the Articles of Faith, they are not derived correctly from the first principles, which are established by nature and are self-evident. Therefore, they do not have the force of demonstrative proofs but are probable reasons or fallacies. And therefore they can be resolved.²⁸

This quotation is remarkable, for, as it stands, it suggests that each and every argument against the Articles of Faith can positively be shown to be false. However, in his Commentary on Boethius's De Trinitate, Aquinas gives a more precise account of the question at stake. Here he says:

²⁴ For a more detailed analysis of the position Aquinas develops in the first nine chapters of the Summa contra gentiles, M. LUTZ-BACHMANN, Rationalität und Religion. Der Beitrag des Thomas von Aquin zu einer rationalen Grundlegung des Religionsdialogs in der "Summa contra gentiles", in M. LUTZ-BACHMANN-A. FIDORA (Eds.), Juden, Christen und Muslime, cit., pp. 96-118.

²⁵ THOMAS AQUINAS, Summa contra gentiles, I, 3

²⁶ ID., De rationibus fidei, 2.

²⁷ Ibid., 3 et passim.

²⁸ ID., Summa contra gentiles, I, 7: «Ex quo evidenter colligitur, quaecumque argumenta contra fidei documenta ponantur, haec ex principiis primis naturae inditis per se notis non recte procedere. Unde nec demonstrationis vim habent, sed vel sunt rationes probabiles vel sophisticiae. Et sic ad ea solvenda locus relinquitur».

If anything [...] is found [...] contrary to faith, this is not philosophy but rather an abuse of philosophy arising from faulty reasoning. Therefore it is possible to refute an error of this sort by philosophical principles, either by showing that it is entirely impossible or that it is not necessary. For, as matters of faith cannot be demonstratively proved, so some assertions contrary to them cannot be demonstratively shown to be false.²⁹

This passage is more cautious, for it does not claim that all arguments against the Articles of Faith can be shown to be openly wrong, but merely contents itself with saying that they can be shown not to be necessary arguments, thus leading to a kind of stalemate-situation in the dialogue.

In conclusion, what is most important for Aquinas's account of the philosophical foundations for apologetics, is the fact that he provides a metaphysical basis for inter-faith dialogue which is construed in terms of the epistemological distinction between topics, understood as merely probable reasoning, on the one hand, and demonstrative science, on the other, thus pointing to the very limits of philosophical arguments within inter-faith dialogue.

4. Ramon Llull: Reconciling Topics and Demonstration

Compared to Thomas Aquinas, Ramon Llull has often been charged with an extreme rationalism for proving, as he claims, the Articles of Faith by means of «necessary reasons». Others have tried to defend Llull against his critics, alleging that those «necessary reasons» were nothing more than arguments of convenience. Yet, the issue seems to be much more complicated than these positions suggest.

In fact, Llull's philosophico-theological programme has to be seen as a direct answer to the problems of apologetics as these arose from what can be considered the standard account given in his day. In particular, Llull was not satisfied with the scholastic distinction between topics and demonstrative science which led to what he felt was an undue opposition of theology and philosophy. It is precisely this distinction and the opposition deriving therefrom, that Llull wanted to overcome with his so-called Ars: a system which takes the basic concepts of the three monotheistic religions of its time (concepts including God's attributes, the virtues and vices, etc.) and combines them in mechanical figures (i.e. rotating circles) in order to convince Muslims (and Jews) of the logical superiority of Christianity and, so, to convert them to the Christian faith. In integrating logical, ontological, ethical and also philosophico-theological notions, the Ars offers a point of departure which encompasses the ethical approach championed by Gilbert and Abelard as well as the metaphysical one employed by Aquinas.

Now, in order to bridge the gap between topical and demonstrative reasoning, the Ars, which Llull termed both inventiva and demonstrativa, presented new forms of demonstration. In fact, Llull was in complete agreement with his contemporaries, such as Thomas Aquinas, regarding the fact that neither demonstratio propter quid nor demonstratio quia were apt for proving in divinis. Therefore, he devised certain new forms of demonstration, designed to turn topical or, as Llull says, «opinative statements», into demonstrative truths, namely the demonstratio per aequiparantiam and the demonstratio per hypothesim. Both can be understood as direct responses to the Thomasian account.

²⁹ ID., Expositio super librum Boethii De Trinitate, q. II, art. 3, co.; English translation from A. Maurer in: THOMAS AQUINAS, Faith, Reason and Theology, Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies, Toronto 1987, pp. 48-49; the Latin reads: «Si quid autem [...] inventitur contrarium fidei, hoc non est philosophia, sed magis philosophiae abusus ex defectu rationis. Et ideo possibile est ex principiis philosophiae huiusmodi errorem refellere vel ostendendo omnino esse impossibile vel ostendendo non esse necessarium. Sicut enim ea quae sunt fidei non possunt demonstrative probari, ita quaedam contraria eis non possunt demonstrative ostendi esse falsa, sed potest ostendi ea non esse necessaria».

Aquinas, as we have seen, rejected the possibility of proving in divinis by means of demonstratio propter quid, since God's quiddity remains inaccessible; similarly, no demonstration in divinis is possible for him either by means of demonstratio quia, since the effect does not possess the same power as its cause. It is precisely here that Llull's demonstratio per aequiparantiam comes into the play as a form of demonstration based on equally powerful terms, namely, God's attributes, whose relation is not one of cause and effect – either in the sense of a descent or an ascent –, but of equality.³⁰ Along with his theory of the correlatives, this type of demonstration is used by Llull to put forward proofs about God's inner relatedness and ultimately about the Trinity. However, since much has been said about the significance of this type of demonstration, we shall not dwell on this.³¹

Instead we shall have a look at Llull's demonstratio per hypothesim, a subject which seems to have been neglected so far. Actually, Llull does not arrive at an explicit formulation of this type of demonstration until very late in his life, but it is an underlying feature of most of his production ever since the earliest days. It is only in 1312, however, that Llull sets out his theory in some detail, in a book called De novo modo demonstrandi, which he dedicates to the Emperor of Sicily, Frederic III, and the Archbishop of Monreale, Arnau de Reixac.³²

As in the case of Llull's demonstratio per aequiparantiam, his demonstratio per hypothesim can also be understood as a response to Aquinas, namely to his negative procedure of refuting the arguments against faith. As we have seen, in the more optimistic picture Aquinas draws of this procedure in the Summa contra gentiles, it seems that any objections against the Christian faith could be shown to be false. This is Llull's starting point: take two not only contrary but also contradictory topical statements about Christian faith as opposing hypotheses, e.g. God became man and God did not become man. Now, you do not have to prove that God in fact became man, for it suffices to show that the contradictory hypothesis is false.³³ Indeed, in many of Llull's works we find arguments which adhere closely to this pattern: what Llull customarily demonstrates is the impossibility of a supposedly contradictory topical hypothesis, an impossibility which leads to the necessity of the affirmation of its opposite.

With these new logical devices, Llull's Ars aimed at reconciling topical and demonstra-

³⁰ Llull already introduces demonstratio per aequiparantiam in his Ars demonstrativa (c. 1283). In 1305 Llull devoted a whole tract to this topic, the Liber de demonstratione per aequiparantiam, edited by A. Madre in Raimundi Lulli Opera Latina IX (CCCM 35), Brepols, Turnhout 1981, pp. 201-231.

³¹ Cf., for instance, the detailed discussion in J. M. RUIZ SIMON, L'Art de Ramon Llull i la teoria escolàstica de la ciència, Quaderns Crema, Barcelona 1999, pp. 238-295.

³² The text has been edited by A. OLIVER-M. SENELLART in Raimundi Lulli Opera Latina XVI (CCCM 78), Brepols, Turnhout 1988, pp. 339-377.

³³ Ibid., pp. 356-360.

tive reasoning for the purposes of inter-faith dialogue, but not for these purposes alone. For Llull thought of his Ars as a universal science which he opposed to standard scholastic epistemology, the latter, in his eyes, being deficient because of its undue separation of topics and demonstrative science. His attempt to bring together both parts of Aristotelian logic was to have important consequences for the history of philosophy: Nicholas of Cusa, for instance, took over Llull's project with his Ars conjecturalis, as did Leibniz with his Characteristic Universalis – two philosophical projects which attempted to go beyond the scholastic separation of topical and demonstrative reasoning.

Against this background, the tradition of medieval inter-religious dialogue can be understood not only as a reflection upon the different faiths – an element of no slight importance itself, of course –, but it is also a significant contribution towards a critical and constructive determination of the very concept of philosophical rationality and dialectic, and therefore an integral part of the self-image and self-conception of philosophers and philosophy.